

October 22, 2013

Marietta City Schools

Reference: CGLS Architects

Having served with Cobb County Schools and Fulton County Schools and now with Education Planners, I have had the fortunate opportunity to work with CGLS Architects on many occasions. Most recently, The Greene County Schools, Greensboro, Georgia complete renovation of the high school stadium complex. The athletic complex had not received any sufficient attention for almost twenty years. The project designed and supervised by CGLS became the interest of the County. Most any day interested community members would stand just outside of the fenced area watching in disbelief with the accomplishments and amazement with what was occurring. From a stadium about to fall down, a concession with very little electricity, no track, and a grassed field with more anthills than grass - to a new stadium, field house, concessions, track and field. All completed without disruption of the instructional day and within the board approved budget and timeline. I must say the weather cooperated. The football team made the playoffs for the first time in ten years and last year the first home track meet was held in over twenty years. Needless to say the Greene County community is ecstatic. This could not and would not have been accomplished without CGLS.

CGLS Architects is very well known as an organization of great character and integrity. They are great architects as well. It is without hesitation that I recommend CGLS Architects; they are very capable of completing your stadium project with the same results found in Greene County Schools.

James Wilson, CEO Education Planners

